Brianna,

I do not know the exact amount of money that the US government agencies are spending on the work highlighted in the commitments. But, it's safe to say that between The work at EPA (both OAR and ORD) and The Fogarty center at NIH — four and six hundred K annually.

Thanks John,

Jane did ask how much money the US is putting into the work that's being highlighted in the commitments – do you know how much EPA is planning to spend on the cookstove work?

Brianna,

I do not have off the shelf material on the 4 areas: the Standards Dissemination Workshops; the contribution of household energy emissions to ambient air pollution; capacity building for stove design and performance; and stove testing in the lab and field – it is just what we do.

I am attaching a concept note for the Nepal workshop. Please note that it says that the workshops are sponsored by WHO and the Alliance – EPA is providing significant funding for the workshops, on the planning committee, drafted the agendas, and will be facilitating the workshops.

If Jane, Ted, or Marianne have general, or specific, questions, I am happy to answer them.

Thanks,

John

Hi John,

Do you have any off-the-shelf background material or one pages on the cookstoves work we are putting forward in the US voluntary commitments? I'm putting together the books that Jane, Ted, and Marianne will be taking so am trying to compile as much as possible today.

Thanks,
